Nelson Azevedo

Human Movement System (Re)habilitation

Nelson J. C. Azevedo is graduated in Physiotherapy by ISAVE (2006) and obtained his postgraduate degree (2006) and M.Sc. (2009) in Cardiovascular Prevention and Rehabilitation at ICBAS. He is currently finishing his PhD in Physiotherapy at the FADEUP – University of Porto, with the theme of postural analysis and factors associated with the manifestation of back pain in children and adolescents. He is also Associate Professor in the Department of Physiotherapy of ISAVE and integrated researcher in CICS – Centro Interdisciplinar em Ciências da Saúde

He is co-author on nearly 40 articles in national and international journals and conferences and has been involved in a total of 11 research projects involving competitive funds. Lecturer in neuroscience of human movement in several postgraduate and postgraduate courses, with emphasis on the neural systems of automatic movement patterns and the motor reflex control systems and their clinical application in the field of Physiotherapy.

His main research areas include human Movement, Biomechanics and Postural Control, especially in the field of rehabilitation sciences and neuroscience.

ORCID: orcid.org/0000-0003-0708-9207

E-mail: nelson.azevedo@docente.isave.pt